Dear Bill:

I've read your note of August 6 and concur that differing perceptions among U.S. Agencies as to the intelligence threat posed by the People's Republic of China suggest an expanded dissemination of case studies may be helpful.

As you are no doubt aware, our China/Far East operations unit is in regular contact with your East Asia Division and items of current interest are frequently shared. Consistent with operational considerations, we conduct briefings of China Desk personnel at U.S. Department of State, and various other components of the Intelligence Community, including military representatives. Ambassador Hummel, prior to his posting to the U.S. Embassy, Beijing, was briefed in depth on the China target from our counterintelligence view. A Foreign Counterintelligence Review, the most recent edition of which was disseminated in May, 1982, updated the U.S. Intelligence Community on the hostile PRC threat and specifically discussed two operations indicative of the nature of this threat.

Consistent with your recommendation and to insure that no questions remain insofar as our assessment of the hostile threat from the PRC, we would be happy to supplement existing publications with appropriately sanitized studies.

Sincerely,

William H. Webster
Director
